COURSE CODE: H-ME-01

LEVEL: Basic to Intermediate

LANGUAGE: Bahasa & English

OVERVIEW

Pumps are essential components in almost all industries and required to meet system demands as well as operate safely, economically and reliably. This course will describe the function of both positive displacement and centrifugal pumps, discuss the operational characteristics, and explain the maintenance requirements.

Additionally, the course will discuss cost efficiency in terms of energy consumption and will provide information on selecting and purchasing the correct pump for a particular application.

OBJECTIVES & LEARNING OUTCOMES

Main learning outcomes of this course:

- Be aware of the performance characteristics of positive displacement and centrifugal pumps
- Understand the operational and maintenance aspects of various pumps
- Become familiar with the components of positive displacement and centrifugal pumps
- Appreciate the influence of fluid sources and attached piping

FIND OUT HOW TO:

- ⇒ Focus on the real problem
- ⇒ Save wasted effort on unnecessary pump & motor repairs
- ⇒ Quickly determine a pump's performance
- ⇒ Correlate pump reliability and hydraulic performance
- ⇒ Visually assess bearing & seal service
- ⇒ Predict time to probable component failure
- ⇒ How to properly install and commission a pump
- ⇒ Optimize mechanical seal service life
- ⇒ Optimize bearing life
- ⇒ Improve power train (motor, coupling, pump) efficiency
- ⇒ Predict pump performance changes with variable speed motors
